

EXERCISE 37-3 Quotation marks Before working this exercise, read section 37 in Rules for Writers, Fifth Edition.

In the following sentences, insert needed quotation marks and punctuation used with quotation marks. If a sentence is correct, mark it "OK." Example:

One of Braille's students wrote, "Attending his classes was a pleasure to enjoy rather than a duty to fulfill."

1. Louis Braille asked the inventor of the military raised-dot system a serious question "Do you think it would be possible to change the symbols in some way, to reduce them in size?"
2. Barbier, the inventor of the system, replied "Of course. Anything is possible."
3. "I have hoped" said the founder of the institute "that this school would be a bright torch held aloft to bring light to the blind."
4. "I am going to instruct the teachers to begin using your system in the classroom," said the institute director. "You must understand, though, that your method has not yet been proved."
5. Louis Braille wanted a system so complete that people could read and write the words and music to a song like the Marseillaise, the French national anthem.
